Call for papers

The Society for Women in Philosophy is holding the next symposium at Johannes Kepler University, Linz

Subject: The Future of Europe as a pressing philosophical question dates: Friday and Saturday 17th and 18th November 2017.

Women in philosophy from all disciplines, sub-disciplines and tendencies inside philosophy are warmly invited to give a lecture at this symposium. There is an open section too, where we gladly embrace abstracts dealing with any topic.

Does Europe have a future? What is wrong with Europe currently? Is Europe synonymous with the European Union? At the moment in Europe we can observe the worst manners of violation of human rights, xenophobia and hostility towards refugees, the worst forms of populism and right wing radicalism.

The Society for Women in Philosophy would like to invite philosophers to present papers from the viewpoint of moral-, political-, social-, feminist philosophy and from the perspective of philosophy of religion. Let us take a look at the immense political and social problems in Europe and in our world in general.

Deadline for abstracts, to be sent to brigitte.buchhammer@a1.net

Friday 13th October 2017

We extend our warmest invitation to all participants.

Dr. Brigitte Buchhammer, President of the Society for Women in Philosophy SWIP Austria
